THE WIFE OF A MORMON ELDER! "That one half of the world cannot imagine how the other half live," is no less true than trite; and the les-on the adage affords, our experience and observation tally tends to verify. Then, two, when we consider the ever-varying phases of burnan passion, and the discor-dant elements from which all novel and fanatical sects dant elements from which all movel and fametical sects are monided, it can accurely seem surprising that a faithful record of actual events should exceed in singularity the wildest drawn of remaner; or that crimes, both strange and unnatural, should be perpetrated in a far-off country, on the outshirts of evilization, which people in another state of society would never lumning possible. Knowing, as I do know, the evils and horrors and aboniuntions of the Mormon system, the deproduction it imposes on families, and the consequent elects which extend through all the ramifications of the society, a sense of duty to the world has induced me to propare the following narrative for the public eye. The remainic incharativenuscied with my experience, many may think bordering on the marvelous. To them I would say, that this narrative of my life only proves what has so often been proved before, that "Intern is Stranger than Fiction." —[Author's Preface.
